Israelis tour Egypt as protests continue

CAIRO, Jan. 27 (Agencies) — Israeli tourists drove overland into Egypt Sunday as the border opened to civilian traffic for the first

A bus load of about 40 tourists from Israel carrying American, French and European passports crossed the border, the Egyptian Governor of north Sinai, Muhammad Hussein Shawkat said.

The governor said by telephone from the Mediterranean coastal town of El Arish that none of the tourists carried Israeli passports.

Many Israelis hold second passports issued by their country of origin which do no require visas to enter Egypt.

Kuwait said the normalization of relations will have "an adverse affect on the Egyptian people in particular and the Arab nation in general," Kuwaiu Minister of State for Cabinet Affairs Abdul-Aziz Hussein told reporters after a weekly cabinet session that the Egyptian government's decision would cause great damage to the Egyptian people.

Palestinians in the Israeli-occupied West Bank of the Jordan river closed their shops to express their opposition to the formal opening of the Egypnan-Israeli frontier, but shops in Gaza were open as usual.

Ten Arabs were wounded in the town of Gaza, which is also occupied by Israel, when a hand grenade was tossed at a passing Israeli nulitary patrol Sunday, police in Jerusalem said. There was no report of any military casualnes.

Shops were closed in mainly Muslim west Beirut and several other parts of Lebanon. There were strikes in Syria and Iraq.

Bani-Sadr to outline 'immediate program'

TEHRAN, Jan. 27 (R) — Finance Minister Abolhassan Bani-Sadr, coasting to a comfortable victory in Iran's first Presidential election, was expected to outline his immediate program at a Tehran press conference

With about one third of the results of Friday's poll announced, Bani-Sadr had 5,164,771 votes while his nearest rival, Admiral Abmad Madani, bad only 1,136,781. Trailing far behind was the candidate backed by much of the ruling clergy. Dr.

Hassan Habibi, with 39,731 votes. Bani-Sadr is likely to announce a nationwide congress of his supporters in Tehran sometime next week to plan his campaign for next month's Parliamentary elections.

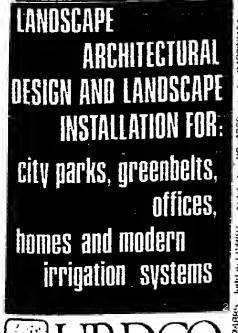

Bani-Sadr outlined the plan in an election-night interview, saying it was essennal to have a Parliamentary majority that could work with the President and his gov-

Study given for Hejaz line

By Timothy Sisley

JEDDAH, Jan. 27 - A feasibility study on rebuilding the Hejaz Railway between Damascus and Medina was awarded Sunday. It is understood that the contract was won by a West German group led by Dorsch Consult.

The award was made at a meeting in Amman of the Tripartite Committee for the Recommissioning of the Hejaz Railway, SPA reported. The committee is made up of the communications and transport ministers of Saudi Arabia, Jordan and Syria; Sheikh Hussein Mansourt, Ali Suhaimat and Muharram

The agency gave no further details, but Sheikh Hussein said recently that work is to start on the project as soon as the feasibility study is complete. It involves rebuilding on standard gauge the 1,300 kilometers of narrow-gauge track, built in 1908 and destroyed by Sherif All's Arabarmies during the revolt of 1917. Zia urges collective action

ISLAMABAD. Jan. 27 (AP) — The President of Pakistan, Gen. Muhammad Zia Ul-Haq, on Sunday urged the conference of Islamic foreign ministers to agree on collective security measures to prevent Soviet intervention in another Muslim nation.

Speaking to ministers convened here to discuss the Soviet intervention in Afghanistan, Zia said the Soviet move posed a grave threat to the entire Muslim world.

"This is the first instance since World War II when a super power has made a sovereign and independent Muslim country the target of its attack. We view this development with the utmost apprehension, because unless this trend to subjugate small countries through the use of force is arrested in time, world peace and the independent existence of small countries would be endangered," be said.

"In order to avoid a recurrence of a similar situation, the Muslim countries must consider ways and means for the collective defence of Islamic Ummah (world)" be said. Zia has sought assistance from China, the

He said that the wave of concern was not limited to neighboring countries but extended to all people throughout the world.

"The whole world, which is closely following these tragic events in Afghanisian, the Muslim nations as a whole, which is appalled by the foreign intervention, as well as all peace-loving nations are looking at us and focusing attention on our deliberations and on the way we deal with this danger," he said. Chatti also said that the Soviet military incursion had not caused the Arab world to lose sight of the Middle East problem.

Jerusalem and Palestine are still occupied by Israel and the Zionisis are in the process of normalizing their presence on our territories, while a sister-state (Egypt) is about to normalize its relations with the enemy," Chain Chatti told the foreign ministers that there were two normalization processes taking place in the Middle East. One was carried out in the occupied territories to give them a permanent Israeli character and the other was to turn dealings with "the enemy" into a normal matter, he said.

This is a critical time for the Islamic nation which is confronted by enemies of Islam from many directions. The Third World, in general, and Muslim states, in particular, are facing a grave situation. Afghanistan has been attacked and other nations are next in line. In view of this situation, the Islamic foreign ministers should face the problem of the Soviet invasion as the one most threatening to the Islamic nation.

unity and complete solidarity to confront the current events. If this test of strength is passed with complete until, it will certainly result in positive action, signaling the liberation of Jerusalem and the creation of a Palestinian state.

But for now, the Soviet invasion is the matter of highest priority. When deliberating over the invasion, there are several issues to be considered.

1 — Unity of the Afghan ranks must be achieved at any cost. 2 - A leader accepted by the majority of Afghans must be found.

3 - This leader must have the full support of other Islamic countries. 4 - Facilities for Afghan refugees must be maintained. 5 - The threat of a holy war (Jihad) must be applied to the Soviets as a condition for withdrawal. 6 - Practical steps must be taken to provide the Afghan freedom fighters with material and financial support. 7 - A strong publicity campaign is required for the mobilization of world opinion. 8 — A strong transmitting radio station is needed to prepare the Afghanistan public for the war and transmit the truth to counteract Soviet lies. Plans must be made for an Islamic Republic government in exile or inside

The announcement was the first indication of an alliance among them to coordinate their efforts against Soviet troops in Afghanistan.

The announcement was made at a press conference attended by Salem Al-Azzam, secretary general of the London-based International Islamic Secretariat for Liberation of Muslim Lands.

Azzaam read three immediate objectives the groups hope to accomplish. They are: - To liberate Alghanistan from an alien and atheist regime,

- To establish a truly Islamic state according to the provisions of the Koran, the Mustim holy book, and teachings of the Prophet Muhammad.

 To cooperate with organizations which are struggling to establish the Islamic system of government and Islamic way of life in their own countries.

However any U.S. forays into the Arabian Gulf/Indian Ocean area are likely to be bampered by what Hanks calls the "lack of reserves in the U.S. Navy." In the short term, the U.S. can pull from its Mediterranean and Pacific fleets. (The U.S. is already doing this by pulling the carrier Nimitz from the Sixth Fleet in the Mediterranean and another aircraft carrier from the Pacific Fleet.)

But this "swing policy" leaves open flanks, and for the future, the U.S. must look to rebuilding its fleet.

This move was backed by the leading Democrats in the U.S. Senate and the SALT I proposal called for a "demilitarized Indian Ocean. But recent events have spotlighted Diego Garcia and its importance.

of good feelings with the Arabs would be for the United States to twist the I srael's arm on Palestinian statehood. There have been various U.S. press reports about the United States's potential use of the bases in the Sinai, which Israel is returning to Egypt under terms of the peace But this would be a colossal mistake and would further alienate Arab states. Hanks noted in a conclusion which is shared by other political observers. Although he lends to discount any carefully laidout Soviet masterplan for the region, Hanks also finds American strategy uncharted in many situations. "The United States often makes foreign policy decisions in a compartmentalized fashion with no thought to ramifications in other parts of the world." To illustrate, Hanks used the example of the United States severing its defense treaty with Taiwan in exchange for establishing full diplomatic relations with the Peoples Republic of China, While touting the wisdom of seeking diplomatic relations with mainland China, Hanks said the abrupt dismissal of Taiwan's defense needs, Hanks said the action greatly disturbed countries, like Saudi Arabia, who look to the U.S. for support.

Shipborne Scandinavian show set

JEDDAH, Jan. 27 - The wealth of Scandinavia will be on show offshore here Tuesday. A shipful of the wares of 100 Danish. Finnish and Swedish companies will tie up in Jeddah port two days of display entitled the Scan-Arah Expo 80.

Sunday Sheikh Ismail Abudawood, the president of the Jeddah Chamber of Commerce, met staff of the embassies of participating countries to speak of the benefits to both exporters and importers of visiting trade

"Arabic-speaking people like the convenience of trade shows coming to our country," he said. The Scandinavian countries were known for fine products that Saudi Arabia

"Business is improving in Saudi Arabia as a result of business diversity in the new generanon. This (show) is a good start, and I am happy you have taken the initiative to come." Chamber of Commerce officials say that if it were not for such exhibitions Saudi Arabian businessmen would limit themselves to traditional, narrow markets. Abdul Wahab Abu Zinada, manager of the chamber, said, "I like the idea of open competition. You have to expose all there is to see what is the best product."

Scandinavian countries are among the countries bringing quality products to the Kingdom, Abu Zinada said. "So far there have been no complaints about any of their products, and as long as they keep it this way, then we'll be bappy to bave them back."

The Scan-Arab Expo repeats the floating Holland Expo last year. Floating shows were first initiated by Abudawood with the Japanese and French. Invitations may be obtained through the Scandinavian Embassies, the Alatas Agency in the Johara building and the Jeddah Chamber of Commerce.

The Kingdom is one of Sweden's largest customers, the largest buyer in Asia with imports in 1979 of $500 million.

Ivan Palmeholt, commercial counselor for the Swedish Embassy, said more than 100 Swedish companies are doing business in the country and more than 40 are involved in joint ventures.

He said," What we have to consider is that the exposition will have a wide variety of products, and although Scandinavian countries face competition from lower-priced countries, we still have quality to offer to the local businessmen.

'Twenty-five per cent of our gross national product is exports, somebody must want to buy our products."

Dan Larson, Danish commercial counselor, said exports from Denmark have notched 50 per cent growth. "From a Danish viewpoint this is very satisfactory." In 1979, 45 per cent of Danish exports were of food. "Indications around Saudi Arabia's third Five-Year plan suggest the Kingdom will proceed from infrastructure to industry and agriculture," he said.

With the growing prosperity of the country there has been a great leap in education and unprecedented facilities afforded the young to learn and train. It is less than gratifying that our young people do not seem to care sufficiently about acquiring the best there is to learn. They are more interested in other things. Nor are they being belped by parents and guardians busy with other matters like travelling money making and speculation.

The result is reflected in the state of our scientific research and creative effort.

I believe that those involved in education in this country should study the situation and propose alternative methods to strengthen the bond between teacher and taught, so that we may eventually realize our objectives and bring about the society that we want.

Temperatures will continue to rise in most areas, particularly in the western and northwestern regions.

Saudi writer argues veil gives honor to women

IEDDAH, Jan. 27 - A Saudi Arabian woman columnist argues that the veil is inseparable part of the freedom and respect granted women by Islam. The assertion made in an unsigned article in Al Medina Sunday, was the second in a series on the value of veiling.

She compared historical cases of the treatment of women and the influence of Islam. and drew the conclusion that only Islam set women free.

She said that woman was deprived of al her rights in the pre-Islamic era. She was treated like a beast. But, with the advent o Islam, Muslim woman regained all her rights and recovered her lost dignity and high posi tion for the first time in recorded history.

He is also to discuss coordinated action by Syria and the Soviet Union to counter what sources here described as the growing American influence in the Middle East as a result of the normalization of Egyptian-Israeli relations.

Gromyko, who was greeted at Damascus Airport by his Syrian counterpart Abdul Halim Khaddam, is to spend three days here during which he will deliver a message to President Hafez Assad from the Kremlin leaders.

"The international situation has become much more dangerous because of the behaviour of certain powers," Gromyko told airport reporters in a hrief statement. "My talks with the friendly Syrian leaders will be comprehensive on all international issues."

Informed sources said the Kremlin has been upset by the widespread uproar in Arab and Islamic countries against the Soviet action in Afghanistan.

Gromyko, these sources said, will ask the Syrians to communicate Moscow's reassurances to Arah and Islamic governments about Soviet intentions in Afghanistan.

The nature of these assurances was not

Mideast tops agenda of U.S. Congress

WASHINGTON, Jan. 27 - The U.S. Congress reconvenes this week and foreign policy and defense issues — generated by the Soviet incursion into Afghanistan and the continuing crisis in Iran — are expected to dominate the agenda.

Both the Senate and House will plunge immediately into foreign policy issues, and much of the action will not occur on the Senate and House floors, but in committee meeting rooms.

One of the first items to receive lawmakers' attention will be the administration's proposed $400 million aid package to Pakistan. But in order to approve the economic and military assistance, Congress must waive a cutoff off aid imposed only last April.

In addition to the specific aid proposal for Pakistan, the House Foreign Affairs Committee will be taking up the fiscal year 1981 economic and military assistance requests from several Middle Eastern-

The House Foreign Affairs Committee, which has an investigative oversight role, in addition to its legislative role, will look at past U.S. policy in the Gulf and study what course the U.S. should follow there in the future, a congressional aide said.

During the early period of the Iranian crisis, Congress said it would refrain from conducting hearings until the bostage crisis was resolved, but now that the embassy siege has dragged on, a congressional aide noted that there are "questions that have to be asked now."

Congress will also be studying issues dealing with Saudi Arabia - specifically a $120 million arms sales which is pending on Capitol Hill.

Al Azhar parley urges end to anti-Muslim drive in Egypt

By a Staff Writer

JEDDAH, Jan. 27 - Plagued by controversy and turmoil, Egypt's Islamic institutions convened one of their largest conferences three weeks ago to condemn the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan and demand a purgue of anti-Islamic tendencies within Egypt.

Held at Al Azhar Muslim university, one of the world's most venerable Islamic insitutions, the conference led to the Egyptian government's arrest and imprisonment of hundreds of "criminals" against the state.

Later, in Alexandria, 70 people were arrested for belonging to Al Jihad, an extremist Muslim group.

The actual resolutions of the conference received little publicity. These demanded the withdrawal of Soviet troops from Afghanistan and declared it the duty of all Muslims to aid their Afghan brothers with donations and fighting assistance.

The conference urged all Islamic states to sever diplomatic, economic and military relanions with the Soviet Union, It said Muslims are responsible for the restoration of all occupied Islamic lands, including those in the Soviet Union, Palestine and Afghanistan.

The conference asked for an end to anti-Islamic campaigns in the Egyptian media especially those aimed at Al Azhar and its ulema. They singled out the Al Akhbar newspaper and Masonic leader Muhammad Said Al Ashmawi for recent attacks on Islam.

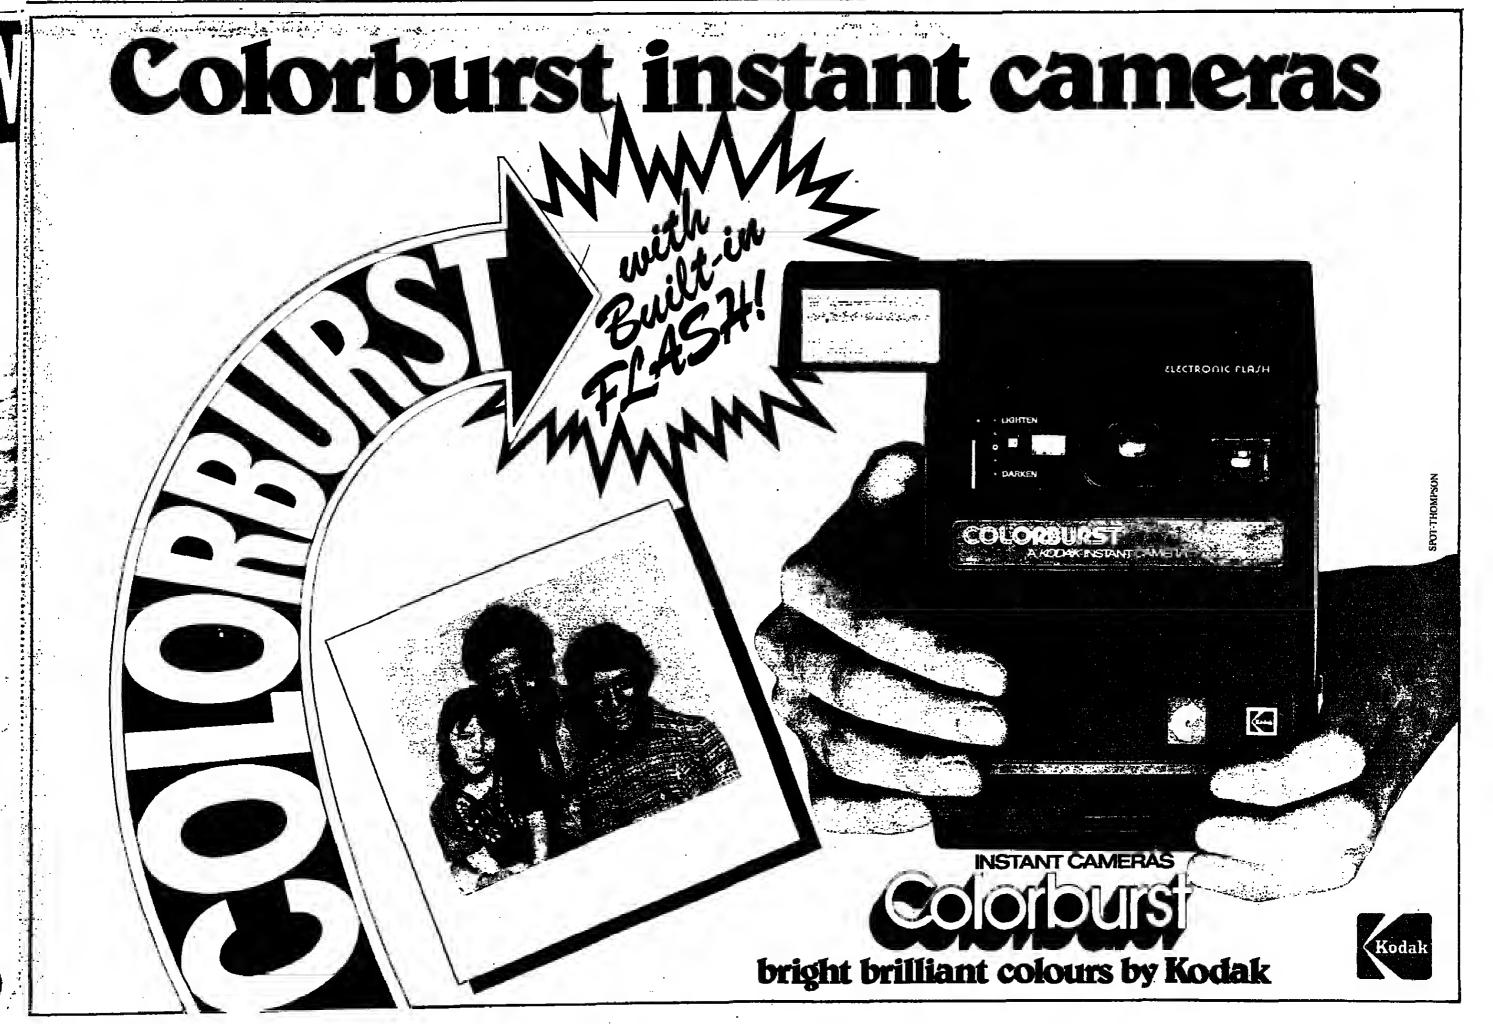

Rotary clubs were charged with having Zionist links and the conference said they should be banned hecause they pose a threat to Islam. The conference urged the government to end ann-Islamic, Christian-inspired attacks in openly distributed leaflests.

Other resolutions included the demand that a definite date be set for the application of Sharia law in Egypt, They also called for the publication of the Al Azhar newspaper.

They called on government media and the education ministry to guide the youth of Egypt toward a more sober and higher standard of learning - away from a profligate way of life.

"The Muslim people are in great need of the leadership of Al Azhar," the resolution said. They called on the government to restore the independence of the institution return its confiscated properties and allow the worldwide ulema to elect its head.

Another conference is scheduled for next month to evaluate any government steps that have been taken to carry out these resolu-

U.S. says Hanoi threatens Thais

State Department, pointing to reported concentrations of Vietnamese troops on the Thai-Cambodian border, has called on Vietnam and the Soviet Union to take no action that would threaten the security of Thailand.

State Department officials said Saturday that 500,000 to 700,000 Cambodian refugees are in Thailand, having fled famine or repression at home. They report about 50,000 Vietnamese troops in the region.

"Vietnamese military activity in this area." said a department statement," poses a potential threat to the security of Thailand." It said that increased military activity would threaten "the peace, security and stability of the entire region."

"More bruadly," the statement went on, "we urge them (the Vietnamese and Soviets) 10 seek a peaceful solution to the issues of Kampuchea (Cambodia) which would involve the end of hostilities and the withdrawal of all the foreign troops and the creation of a genuinely independent and representative Khmer government at peace with all its neighbors.

Later, the State Department issued another version of its statement, speaking of "recent Viernamese military reconnaissance operations" instead of "large Vietnamese troop deployments" and added a reference to "increasingly harsh Vietnamese propaganda attacking horder relief operations, and recent intelligence which point to possible Vietnamese attacks on the concentration of refugees along the Thai-Kampuchean border."

The second statement welcomed expressions of concern issued by Japan, the European community. Australia. New Zealand and Canada.

It urged that concerned governments continue to support international organizations working at the border and inside Cambodia.

Refugees have been fleeing Cambodia in increasing numbers since the Vietnamesebacked regime of Heng Samrin ousted the Pol Pot regime in 1978 and growing famine has been reported in the country.

Troops loyal to the former government are still fighting a guerrilla war to regain power, and there were reports last month that the biggest forces are believed to be along the Thai border.

The State Department officials mentioned the Soviet allies of the Vietnamese in their assessment of the situation Saturday. They referred to concern over reports of large Vietnamese troop deployments near the border and said other countries, including Japan, New Zealand and Australia, had also expressed concern.

The officials said the area they are worried about is near the town of Aranya Prathet, directly east of Bangkok and about 140 k.m north of the Gulf of Siam.

They estimate 500,000 to 700,000 Camhodians have taken refuge in the Thai border area under the care of several hundred aid personnel from the United States and other countries. Over the past few weeks, according to these officials, the Vietnamese have been building up to a force of some 50,000

Thai forces in the area are about as strong, the State Department officials said, and would resist thrusts into their country. "we think the Thais could handle," one of the officials said, "but there might be serious fighting."

A quarter of a million of the 700,000 Cambodian refugees are concentrated in the two camps of Nong Samet and Non Mak Mun. north of Aranya Prathet, south of the town are the forces of Pol Pot, which were ousted from power by Heng Samrin and the Vietnamese troops who invaded Cambodia.

After all the trials the Cambodians have gane through, the people in these two camps represent about 10 per cent of the country's remaining population. They are being supplied with food, which the State Department officials say the Vietnamese and their Cambodian friends have been unable to do, and for that reason the refugees are received by them as a threat.

The State Department officials say that in addition to the concentration of Vietnamese troops, there has been a propaganda build-up in the media under Vietnamese control. They also report that a high level defector from the Heng Samrin government has said that an attack by the Vietnamese was planned for the end of January.

Such an attack would spread the refugees deep into Thailand and create considerable problems for the Thai authorities, they said.

Britain flies blood by bird

(Express) - Harry Walsh's 24 racing pigeons have been signed up by the British government to belp save lives.

The birds carry urgent blood samples across Plymouth from Devonport Hospital to a laboratory at the Freedom Fields Hospital two and a half miles away. 'Little arrangements' illegal, but Russians require them

WASHINGTON, Jan. 27 (AP) - A Soviet official sets a buge production qunta, but the factory manager can't meet it with government materials. The manager bribes a supplier who bas extra materials bidden at a rail yard where be's done a favor for the government inspector. The inspector knows the bidden materials are illegal but keeps

Indeed, each step of the process is illegal, but Soviet emigrants and U.S. experts say the process itself is part of a " second economy" vital to survival of the Soviet Union's official, ideologically pure, Communist system.

The cost, they told a Congressional subcommittee last week, is a deep cynicism about day-to-day life and government, a cynicism that Soviet citizens wear like a protective shield against uneasy thoughts about their Society.

Quiet arrangements based on favors or fear are crucial in many aspects of Soviet life, said the witnesses before a House of Representatives intelligence subcommittee: from getting an apartment, to gething into college, to getting on a government list for

And though the cynicism bebind such widespread arrangements may be churning Soviet insides, it leads to outward stability, they said.

So the government, which knows all about these little, bidden arrangements, says Official interference - or prosecution - is selective but possible, so citizens develop " a sense of who's a threat, where they can be careless, who to beware of," said Leon Lipson of Yale University. " It's an unpleasant situation to be in, but they've learned to live with it, " he said." We don't know what sort of strain this presents."

Not a strain that will topple the government soon, be and the other witnesses before the subcommittee agreed. Especially if, as Lipson said, " a modest decline" in repression and brutality" bas been bought at the price of a modest rise in hypocrisy.

They acknowledged the United States and other Western nations are bardly immune to corrupt arrangements, but they concentrated on Soviet problems, the subject of the panel's two-day hearing.

Sakharov's exile called 'fair'

MOSCOW, Jan. 27 (AP) - The Kremlin officials who banished buman rights advocate Andrei Sakharov from Moscow followed a precedent older than the Soviet state. The Czars silenced dissent the same way, exiling such outspoken Russians as poet Alexander Pushkin, revolutionary Vladimir Lenin and thousands of others.

Governments across the world bave protested what they see as Sakharov's "arrest and exile." But Soviet leaders say they have taken a "bumane and fair" step against a "slanderer and renegade" by "resettling" bim outside of Moscow, instead of prosecuting him for criminal libel or worse. The furor erupted Tuesday when Sakharov, who won the Nobel peace prize as patriarch of the Soviet dissident movement, was picked up outside his Moscow apartment and sent off to the Gorky.

The Volga port city, 400 km east of the capital, is closed to foreigners, thus barring Sakharov the direct link with foreign reporters who often transmitted his anti-Soviet statements abroad.

Sakharov's dissident friends in Moscow said it is still too early to tell whether the move could actually silence Sakharov, or his wife, Yelena Bonner, who voluntarily joined bim in exile. But most believe be will be able to pursue at least some of his dissident activities from Gorky.

So far, there have been no reports of dissidents talking directly with Sakharov. The few reached Moscow so far came from Mrs. Sakharov or from fellow dissidents. Several phone calls from Gorky to Moscow dissidents were cut off abruptly when the subject turned to Sakharov, dissident sources said.

Despite its abrupt action, the Kremlin appeared to be playing down its moves against Sakharov, who made major contributions to his nation before becoming one of its sharpest critics. Some observers see this "soft-sell" as an attempt to defuse foreign

The official Tass news agency stressed Friday that Gorky is hardly a provincial backwater - a cultural, industrial and scientific center with one of the nation's best universities, the agency said.

Although stripped of his influential titles and honors, Sakharov remains a full member of the highly prestigious Soviet Academy of Sciences - possibly because the government couldn't round up enough members to vote him out

Tass also noted that Sakharov - a nuclear physicist often bailed as the father of the Soviet bydrogen bomb — will be allowed to work "according to his specialty."

Sakharov's friends say he has continued to produce important theoretical works as a physicist, even though be bas been barred from sensitive military projects because of his Kremlin criticism. The government, his friends say, may be reluctant to crack down too bard on a productive scientist.

S. Africa guerrillas said foreign-trained

Investigators have said that three black nationalists killed in a bloody shootout with police were identified as guerrillas who had been trained outside the country.

The shock of the most daring guerrilla act ever in white-minority ruled South Africa was expressed in banner newspaper head-lines reading "Bank Bloodbath" and "Death

Gen. Mike Geldenhuys, police commis-sioner, refused to disclose the names of the guerrillas or where they were trained. He said Saturday that two of them were from the capital of Pretoria and the third from Soweto, Johannesburg's black satellite city.

Thousands of young blacks feld South Africa following the Soweto riots of 1976 that killed more than 700 persons, all but a handful of them black, when the rlots spread throughout the country. The government has daimed that many of these blacks have been trained in Marxist countries before infiltrating back into the country with communist-supplied weapons.

Prime Minister P.W. Botha, a hardliner on security matters, vowed: "Any form of terenrism or any act going against the laws of the country will have the state to contend with." His police minister used much stronger

But in a sense, the guerrillas seizure of hostages in a bid to win the release of black political prisoners supports the dire warnings Botha bas been giving to whites: "Adapt or

That message has been especially aimed at tightwing critics who have opposed Botha's liberalization of certain laws of rigid racial separation or apartheid.

The Afrikaans-language newspaper Beeld owned by Botha's National party, editorialized Saturday: "The best resistance South Africa could offer (to terrorism) is a South Africa in which white, black and brown live in peace alongside one another in a constitutional set-up to which they have agreed and which allows each room to live."

The editorial noted that this is Botha's stated goal.

There was no immediate public reaction from black leaders, many of whom bave been predicting increasing violence unless more rapid changes were made in the country's white supremacy laws. Any comment construed as support of the black guerrillas could land the person in jail under this country's strict security laws.

The Transvaal Post, the country's largest daily black newspaper, by coincidence Saturday published a continuing poll of its readers on their choices for the country's top ministerial posts. Four of the five letters nominated Nelson Mandela for minister or president.

The black guerrillas who seized the suburban Pretoria bank sought the release of Mandela and other prisoners. Mandela, the country's most famous political prisoner, has been held in the notorious Robben Island prison for 18 years. The leader of the banned African National Congress was convicted of attempting to overthrow the government

The anti-government Rand Daily Mail of Johannesburg predicted a rightwing backlish to the bank incident in which two bostages were killed. Seventeen other hostages and several policemen were injured. The Mail said, "Yet it in fact means than change is more needed than ever ... it requires no great imagination to realize that embit. tered blacks who left the country after the Soweto disturbances of 1976-77 are new returning as trained terrorists," Soweto is a large black township outside Johannesburg in which police fired upon and killed several students protesting educational policies in black areas. Many were injured in the rioting that followed. Some of the hostages said the guerrillas told them they belonged to the ANC and had been trained in Angola, where they were released. Exiled leaders of the ANC said they doubted their men were involved because of the sloppy way it was handled.

demanded to be flown after the prisnners

The barshest criticism of the government came from abroad. Mike Terry, of a British anti-apartheid group, said, "This sort of tragedy is inevitable. There will be more, of that I am certain. This is the consequence of

Police statements and interviews with hostages, meanwhile, contradicted Police Minister Louis Le Grange's statement earlier that police had only stormed the bank Friday night after the guerrillas started shooting the Police said they stormed the building when, listening through bugging devices, they heard the guerrillas say they would begin killing their hostages soon if their demands were not met.

At that point, witnesses and police say, police rushed through the front door while marksmen sbot two of the guerrillas in the back from a hiding place on the mezzanine above the bank's ground floor. The third guerrilla managed to fire a few shots and detonate a hand grenade before being cut

Twenty-four hours after the six-bour siege at the bank the government continued to deny that the guerrillas sought the release of political prisoners. But several hostages and security sources confirmed it.

Police did confirm that the men were from the ANC, and their fingerprints were to be compared with those found at several recent hit-and-run attacks on police stations.

Interviews with the hostages indicated they bad generally been well-treated. Police were allowed to talk with them and bring them

Windies dominate Aussie batsmen

ADELAIDE, Jan. 27 (R) — Australia's batting buckled under the pressure of the West Indies' four-pronged pace attack on the second day of the third Test here Sunday.

After the West Indies, 303 for eight overnight, were all out for 328, Australia battled grimly to 201 for nine and looked to have little chance of pegging back the touring side's 1-0 lead in the three-match series. Fast bowler Andy Roberts, Michael Holding, Joel Garner and Colin Croft dominated the Australian batting, sharing the wickets between them.

Croft finished with the impressive baul of four 57 from 21 overs but it was Holding and Roberts who did irreparable damage to the

Connors to meet McEnroe in Philadelphia tennis final

PHILADELPHIA, Pennsylvania, Jao. 27 (AP) — Top-seeded Jimmy Connors, still bothered by a nagging groin injury, defeated Gone Mayer 6-4, 6-0, 6-2 Saturday night to set up a Sunday final with No. Two seed John McEnroe in the U.S. Pro Indoor Tennis Tournameot,

The 20-year-old McEnroe, moaning and groaning over line calls and complaining of crowd ooise, reached the final with a 7-6, 4-6, 6-1, 6-3, triumph over uesceded Joho Sadri. McEnroe played almost seven hours of tennis Saturday, including o semifinals dou-bles victory. He hoped his tiring day would oot carry over to Sunday's contest. The final features not only the top two seeds, but also two of the world's best three players. Connors is rated No. two and McEn-

Connors holds a 7-3 advantage over McEnroe from previous meetings. Connors broke the 23-year-old Mayor in the third game of the first set for a 2-1 lead with a fine forehand passing shot down the line on the run for the deciding point. In the eighth game, which he won to take a

5-3 lead in the opening set, Connors appeared to reinjure his groin on an overhead slam of a high lob. After closing out the set 6-4, Connors consulted with trainer Bill Norris and then continued. The defeat for the 23-year-old Sadri ended his week-long string of upsets which included third-seeded Vitas Geruinitis, fifth-seeded Harold Solomon and 13th-seeded Stan Smith, to reach the semifinal.

McEnroe took over the match after losing the second set, which created a 1-1 tie, Sadri broke McEnroe's serve in the nioth game of the second set, cod then served a love game to complete an eight-straight point surge and a 6-4 set triumph. But McEnroe regained his poise end took a 6-1 third-set victory to go aheed two sets to one. He broke Sadri in the second game. it was Sadri's first service loss of the week,

McEnroe reached game point three times before be took advantage of a fourth, forcing Sadri to backhaod out of court. McEnroe also broke service in game four when Sadri's backhaod volley sailed over the baseline. McEnroe polished off the set with an ace.

McEnroe, born in West Germany, where his father was in the U.S. Air Force, grew up in New York. In addition to winning the U.S. Open last year, he won the world championship tennis tour with a victory over Borg. Connors will be . seeking his fourth Philadelphia tournament victory, which would tie an accomplishment by Australia's Rod Laver. He is also attempting to become the first player ever to win this event three consecutive years.

So far this week, Connors bas not lost a set in his four matches. McEnroe's only setback in five matches was the second set loss to

Renault has pole position for Brazil Grand Prix

SAO PAULO, Jan. 27 (R) - Renault and Ligier drivers filled four of the first six places 00 the starting grid for the Brazilian Grand Prix when practice ended on the Interlagos Circuit here Saturday.

Frenchman Jeao-Pierre Jabouille took pole position in his turbocharged Recault after clocking two minutes 21.40 seconds (200.47 kph) in the opening session. His teammate and compatriot Rece Amoux also failed to improve in the wet second session.

Didier Pironi, another Frenchman, starts second on the grid in his Ligier.

Argentine Carlos Reutemann, the winner in 1977 and 1978, was fourth in the successful Williams, just behind the Ferrari of Canadian Gilles Villeneuve. Jacques Laffite of France, last year's winner, fifth best in a Ligier but Australian Alan Jones, the winner of the Argentine Grand Prix, opening round of the 1980 World Championship two weeks ago, was n lowly 10th in bis Saudia Williams.

World champion Jody Scheckter of South Africa was eighth fastest in his Ferrari. Engine problems with Arnoux's Renault allowed him only two laps in Saturday's final trials. He had the second best ome Friday, but was pushed to sixth on the starting grid

Engine problems also hampered Laffite's trial Saturday, but in the four laps be managed, he improved his ome 1.14 seconds, enough to keep him in fifth place for the start, Opposition team members at the track think Jabouille will not hold the lead long once the race is under way. The Renault team, like Ferrari, uses Michelin qualifying tires for prerace trials, uoder special cootracts, while the other teams bave to qualify with ordinary Goodyear race tires. Goodyear does not supply Formula-One cars with the special qualifying tires.

Qualifying tires are softer and give greater tractioo than race tires, and teams using them hove an adventage during time trials. During a race, however, this advantage is lost, because everyone switches to race tires. The qualifying tires weer too quickly to last the 197.85 mlies (318.42 kilometers) of the 40-lap Brazilian Grand Prix.

The Ferreri team's main attraction in Sao Paulo is outh African driver Jody Schecketer. the 1979 World Champion, But Schecktor has oot been impressive this season, which began with the Argentine Grand Prix two

The Lotus team hes hampered by ignition and aerodyoamics problems throughout Saturday's time triais. Marie Andretti, of the United States, was not oble to get his engine running smoothly and be will start Suoday in 11th place. His teammate, Italian Elio de Angeles, cotered the pits with the skirt of his racer crumpled under the chassis. But Lotus mechanics yanked the side off De Angelis' machine and replaced the skirt io 13 minutes, getting him back oo the track in time to qualify seventh. Saturday's sole accident involved France's

Alain Prost, along with Daly. "Prost tried to pass Daly on a curve," team captain Ken Tyrrell said of the McLaren driver after the trials. "But Daly had the line and swung in front of Prost." The two cars touched, sending Daly of the track. Tyrrell said Prost was not at fault, and that Daly, who qualified in 24th, last place, was definitely going to start

Watson takes San Diego lead

SAN DIEGO, California, Jan. 27 (AP) — Despite a less-than-spectacular finish for the third day in a row, Tom Watson managed a four-under-par 63 and moved into a twostroke lead Saturday in the third round of the San Diego Open golf tournament.

Watson, who has dominated pro golf for the past three seasons, bad a 54-hole total of 205, 11 shots under par on the 7,002-yard South Course at the Torrey Pines golf club

But it could have been much better. Just as he did on the first two days, Watson slipped a little on the last two boles. He missed a 10-foot birdie putt on the 17th and, after stopping to that with a television cameraman, failed to birdle the par-five 18th. It was the only five on his card in a no-bogey Watson, player of the year for the past three seasons and opening his 1980 campaign here, missed four greens. "My round revolved around the par-saving putts, and the par-fives. 1 birdied three of them. I said at the start of the tournament that the par-fives are the key. You bave to play them under par.

'And I didn't make a bogey. If I can stay away from the bogeys tomorrow, I've got a good chance to win the golf tournament." Lon Hinkle, a San Diego product, and veteran Ray Floyd, a former Masters and Professional Golfers' Association champioo, shared second at 207. Hinkle did oot make a bogey and did not have a five on his card, which added up to 67. Floyd stayed within a single shot of the top spot most of the day, but

Tied at 209, four shots back, were Bobby Wadkins, Buddy Gardner and Keith Fergus. Wadkins and Gardner shot 69s, Fergus a 71. Craig Stadler, a winner two weeks ago in the Bob Hope Desert Classie and the second round leader bere, went to a fat 76 that left him well back at 212. Fuzzy Zoeller, the Masters titleholder and defending champion here, also took a 76 and was out of title contention at 221. Watson, reached in two on the two par-5's on the front side and had two-putt birdies on both. He also dropped a 25-footer for a birdie, and made three good par-saving putts to forge into the lead. He bad to work hard for pars on the 11th and 12th, the latter with a 12-foot par-saving putt, then chipped to 10 feet and made birdie four on the 13th.

That gave him the lead alone and Floyd's bogey on the 17th put him two in front. Watson, playing in the group behind Floyd, had a chance to stretch it out, but missed birdie opportunities on the last two holes.

Frenchmen favor going to Moscow

PARIS, Jan. 27 (AP) - Frenchmen overwhelmingly favor participation in the 1980 Olympic Games at Moscow even if the United States decides to pull out, according to a poll published Sunday.

The poll, which appears in the latest editioo of the magazine Le Point, was a national sampling of 986 people over the age of 18 taken Jan 22-23 after the Soviet intervention in Afghanistan.

It showed that 72 per cent of those questioned supported participation in the games if the Americans decide on a boycott. Nineteen per cent opposed French participation, and nine per cent had no opinion. Sixty per cent said French athletes should still go even if a number of other Western countries, such as Britain and West Germany, boycott the Games. Twenty-eight per cent said no. Fifty-two per cent said they disapproved of President Carter's use of the Olympics as a lool against the Soviets. His actions were approved by 25 per cent and 13 per cent bad no opinion.

STORM IN A TEACUP

The sensational news given out by Radio Tehran of the deposed Shah's arrest by the Panamanian authorities preparatory to his extradition to Iran, and its quick denial by the Panamanians, might be no more than a storm in a teacup.

The news was so dramatic, however, that it is difficult to think it a pure invention on the part of the Iranians. What is more probable is that the Irauians jumped the gun somewhat; since it is already known that they have been in touch with Panama over the deposed Shah. Did the Panamanians give them to understand that a deal could be arranged? Did the Iranian announcement, being so premature, cause the deal to

There is no way, of course, of providing a definite answer at present. Yet it is believed that the Panamanians have already given the American administration assurances regarding the Shah's safety before he left the United States to reside in Panama. For them to change their minds now would place President Carter in a most embarrassing position. He would appear to have connived in the Shah's extradition from the start. This would, among other things, count very badly against him at a time when he is most concerned with maintaining his image as a resolute leader.

Whatever the truth here, there is another indication from Tehran that something might be afoot over the hostages. This came in the announcement that Ayatoliah Khomeini has canceled all official engagements until February the eighth. Could this mean that the Ayatollah is leaving the stage for the first President of the Islamic Republic, due to be elected this month, to inaugurate his reign in style, perhaps with the release of the bostages? This might explain the announcement of the Shah's arrest, as the beginning of a campaign to convince the Iranian people that the leadership has not gone through the crisis over the hostages for nothing.

As expected, the students holding the hostages appear to have sensed that some developments are in the offing, and have reacted with their customary intransigence. But the students have no real power beyond Khomeini's endorsements for their acts. His temporary retirement would leave them with no way to fight the orders of an incoming president for the release of their prisoners. .

Yugoslavia in the post-Tito era

By Siney Weiland

BELGRADE -Since World War II, President Tito has dominated the political landscape, vigorous and purposeful, a symbol of Yugoslavia's independence

Now, at 87, he faces the prospect of spending whatever time is left to him in a wheelchair, and Yugoslavs are asking whether it already means the beginning of the post-Tito era.

There are anxious questions also about the vitality of the nation's institutions, about the chances for continued unity in a land historically racked by ethnic and religious conflict, and about economic

Above all, Yugoslavs look apprehensively toward the East, aware that no Communist country has defied the Kremlin with so much success, that no Communist leader has broken so dramatically and daringly from Moscow's suzerainty.

At a time of rising tension, alarmed by Soviet intervention in Afghanistan, Yugoslavs (and others) ask whether the Soviet Union may some day be tempted to use its vast political, military or economie power to undermine Yugoslavia's defiant independence.

Tito is recovering, faster than expected, after a near-fatal illness, but is still not out of danger. Belgrade officials, traditionally optimistic, are saying he will soon be back at work. His recovery bas been as remarkable as the man himself. Three days after his left leg was amputated above the knee to relieve a circulatory blockage, he was out of bed, upright in a bospital chair, smiling, asking about the state of the world.

Officials said he agreed reluctantly to the amputation, his second operation in eight days, only when doctors warned him that his life was endangered, apparently by arteriosclerosis and a leg already affected by gangrene. For Yugoslavs, it was a testing and traumatic time. After 40 years with no other leader, this nation of 22 million people has come startlingly face to face with the realization that its normally robust octogenerian president, like others, is mortal.

Two years ago, government spokesmen were angered when foreigners asked, "After Tito. what?" Now, everybody poses the same question. Yugoslavia, suddenly mature, has come to live with the unthinkable.

Constitutionally, Tito is chief of state for life, or as long as be wishes. His tenure as president of the ruling League (Party) of Communists is similarly open-ended. Since 1971, he bas gradually acknowledged the existence of a succession problem. But he has refused to retire or to name a single successor. Instead, he bas bandpicked a collective leadership which, be says, will ensure stability and continuity when eventually he goes.

Following the amputation, there was speculation that be may finally retire, psychologically weakened and conscious that his mobility will be severely limited, Before the operation, he pleaded with doctors, "I want to stay a whole man,"

"If all goes well, in a couple of weeks we shall probably be sitting down together again, solving problems with him," a close associate says.

Another senior official concedes privately, "Let's face it, we are already effectively in the post-Tito

The president's illness provided a dress rehearsal for the successor leadership he has created. It apparently functioned well.

Under the Tito scenario, power rests with the collective presidency of the Communist Party, which lays down basic policy, and with the parallel presidency of the Yugoslav state.

With Tito as chairman of both hodies, the party presidency has 24 members, the state presidency nine. Both are chosen on a regional basis, to represent the interests of Yugoslavia's eight constituent republics and provinces.

Each presidency bas a vice-president, elected by annual rotation to act for the president when he is absent. During his illness, the two presidencies or their committees met frequently in joint session.

In the past two years, the governing groups often met without Tito - further evidence, Yugoslav officials say, that the post-Tito era bas already started. Members of the collective leadership say they are convinced there will be a smooth transition. Others are less confident, But there is wide agreement that the system will function at least for some time after Tito's death.

Until next October, the Communist Party's deputy leader - officially "presiding member" is Stevan Doronjski, 60, a party functionary from the Vojvodina region near the Hungarian border. The state vice-president until May is Lazar Kolisevski, 65, a long-time government and party official from Macedonia.

Although both men are virtually unknown abroad and only marginally known to the public outside their bome regions within the country. senior officials say they would take over automatically as presiding officers of the presidencies if Tito dies while they are in office.

Yugoslav spokesmen see nothing incongruous in this Swiss-type system. They say it is ideally suited to a federated state which seeks to combine the often divergent interests of regional and ethnic communities. The shock effect of the president's illness, it is claimed, has belped cement national

Under the system as fashioned by Tito, it will be bard for any single member of the leadership to amass power or to build a national political base, Many key jobs will soon be rotated annually. There will be every reason, officials say, for the joint leaders to hang together.
Ordinary Yugoslavs as well as Western diplomats are divided in assessing the collective leadership's changes. Many think the system will eventually break apart, when the president is no longer there as final arbiter, and that a single leader will rise to If there is a potential candidate for a supreme role it is 67-year-old Vladimir Bakaric, one of Tito's closest aides in the World War II partisan movement, and an acknowledged federalist.

Because of the sensitive regional fabric of Yugoslay society, there are some doubts whether Bakaric. a Croat, would be acceptable to the country's Serb majority as a successor to Tito, also a Croat.

In what could have been a pointer to the future, be was given unusual television exposure for his political reminiscences while Tito lay ill. In what, may also have been significant, Bakaric reminded Yugoslavs of the country's turbulent past relationship with the Soviet Union.

While Yugoslavs do not fear outright Soviet attack, they are prepared to meet subversion, political penetration, and other pressures.

"The cost of direct military intervention for the Russians would be too high. They know we would fight back. They would be bogged down," a military expert says. (R)

Can Fraser deliver a boom?

SYDNEY -Australia's economy is recovering from the ravages of the 1970s and the country is in a position where our economic stability and strength allow us to be justifiably optimistic for the 1980s," Prime Minister Malcolm Fraser said in his New Year message to the nation.

The problems of the 1970s bad been inflation, wage demands and unemployment, Fraser said. He claimed significant advances for his government on each of these from's as a result of the government's "difficult decisions" to cut spending and curb the rate of growth of money supply.

Fraser's recovery program has been underway for a little over four years. When his conservative Liberal-Country Party coalition came to power in 1975, prices were shooting up at a rate of 18 per cent a year, average weekly earnings were growing at 25 per cent a year and the money supply (M3) was expanding at the unprecedented rate of 23.4

Recent statistics from the Reserve Bank, Australia's central bank, suggest that inflation bas dropped to 9.4 per cent, that money supply growth is slightly above the 1979-80 target of 10 per cent and that average weekly male wages are up 7.4 per cent on an annual basis.

Growth in consumer spending has tended to decline throughout the period, and the prevailing mood of gloom, which the prime minister is trying to dispel, is a major factor in the tendency for Australians to save.

Early in his term of office, Fraser placed much importance on a consumer-led recovery for the Australian economy but the persistence of abnormally high rates of unemployment (above 6 per cent) bas acted as a dampener on personal spen-

Private investment took a battering in the mid-1970s and has only just started to recover. The investment ratio (defined as the ratio of gross fixed private investment to gross domestic prices at 1974-75 prices) fell sharply from 15.9 per cent in 1973-74 to 13.9 per cent the following year and bas remained at this level ever since.

The recovery in private investment that started in 1978-79 resulted from growing demand for plant and machinery, stimulated by tax concessions. Fraser's main problem has been the continuing high level of government expenditure. While growth of government spending has slowed mar-kedly since 1974-75, the share of public sector spending in real, non-farm gross domestic product in 1978-79 was 26.6 per cent — the same as in 1975-76.

Political considerations have forced Fraser to maintain the rate of spending on various welfare and education programs. He can claim some success in achieving his economic goals, but the economy is still far from healthy. (OFNS)

Adjusting to imminent economic doom

By Susan Previant Lee

NEW YORK -Almost everyone in the U.S. these days is adjusting to a sense of impending economic doom, Old comic books and canned food are seen as better investments than IBM or Du Pont. The voices that a decade ago were calling for economic growth as the route to the American dream are silent. Recession is now tacitly welcomed rather than feared - a familiat, almost comfortable evil preferable to a dark, unfamiliar future, Pinning down the sources of this free-floating anxiety, though, isn't a simple task. Perhaps the U.S. economy is going to bell in a hand basket, but conventional measures don't show it. Real disposable income per capita - after-tax income adjusted for inflanon — rose 26 per cent in the "bleak" years of 1969 to 1978. That's almost as much as the 30-per cent gain record in the "good old days' of 1960 to 1969.

Nor is the perception of malaise a reflection of the special problems of a small but articulate elite, who did somewhat better: The top 5 per cent of all families took home 15.7 per cent income in 1977, compared to 15.5 per cent in 1965.

The stock market, of course, has performed miserably of late, with the inflation-adjusted Standard and Poor's composite index down 39 per cent between 1969 and 1977. But that's not because of some identifiable failing by corporations to bold their own in the economic jungle. The after-tax return on stockholders' equity in manufacturing rose from 11.5 per cent to 14.2 per cent. Business gains have been made despite successful efforts by the government to hold producers to a standard of good citizenship.

Energy, of course, is a downer. Here too, though the perception that the cost of fuel or shortage of it must curtail economic progress is out of line with reality. The links between energy and growth have proved far more flexible than anyone imagined. There is every reason to believe that, if wellmanaged politically, the economy can adjust to lower levels of oil imports.

Why, then, the pervasive sense of economie failure? Statistics . that show the average American doing well mask the fact that most individuals are now at greater economic risk. Inflation is the prime culprit. Per capita income and wealth have substantially outrun the consumer price index, but rising prices have created large numbers of losers.

The few million Americans who depend on pension and investment income fixed long ago in mooetary terms are of course in trouble. Investors with tax bills on capital gains that reflect nothing more than inflation are also unhappy. So, too, must be the people who consume relatively large amounts of expensive fuel and food, or work for companies (like Chrysler) that are particularly sensitive to changing relative prices.

Average wages are up, but inflation bas created a free-for-all in which unionized workers protected by cost-of-living contract clauses have done far better than non-union workers. Skyrocketing housing prices have had little impact on the living standards of the majority who own their own homes, but not so the rest of the population that sees the dream of three bedrooms and an evenlevel micro fast fading.

Aggregate statistics also obscure demographie and social changes that create economic discontent, White-collar workers are faring less well on the average-trained labor force has grown more rapidly than the labor force as a whole. Family income has increased, but the gain is largely due to the entry of wives into the work force, and many husbands are no doubt ambivalent about their new household obligations,

Another source of discontent that is hard to document is the sense of sbrinking opportunities among the young, particularly white males. The "baby boom" created a dense clot of people now in their 20s - people destined to fight with each other all their lives for the good jobs. While affirmative action has surely created more smoke than fire to date, it is true that most white males ifeel afflicted. by the new competition.

The irony here is that the best way to make Americans feel better about themselves is probably the opposite of a "realistic" recognition that times are tough and likely to get tougher in the 1980s. Economic growth — the more the better — would create jobs at the top, relieving the frustrations of professionals now blocked from advancement. Increasing the size of the whole economic pie. moreover, would reduce the number of absolute losers suffering from shifts in the demand for skills. Further, it would free resources to right socioeconomic wrongs and clean up the environ-

rent The Kingdom fights against polio

By Joyce Prince

UYADH — Poliomyelitis, known for ny years as infantile paralysis, is an acute il illness characterized by fever, sore oat, bead-ache and in more severe cases, alysis of any number of muscles.

Because of the apparent increase in the idence of poliomyelitis in Saudi Arabia, a nposium to study and develop recommenions for control of the disease was beld nuary 15 through 17 at the University of

Dr. Charles Eberle, Chief of Orthopedic rgery at King Faisal Specialist and search Center and Chairman of the symsium committee explained, "There has en a recent increase in numbers of patients ing treated in various centers in the Kingom who have complications of iliomyelitis. This Symposium "bas been ganized to provide information to all those ithin the Kingdom who are involved in any ay with the management of those afflicted ith the disease."

Lectures illustrated with slides, video film nd panel discussions at the symposium mpbasized the desperate need for immunation through vaccination.

... "Polio can cause total paralysis of musles," Dr. Abdulrahman Swailem, a promient Riyadh physician, said, "and as a result, racic disability. This can be completely preented with a few drops of vaccine. We want · p see fewer and fewer cases of this disease in audi Arabia, and in time, total eradication." In the past several years the Ministry of fealth bas tried to develop statistics about aralytic forms of polio in the Kingdom and o what degree those afflicted with the dissase, take advantage of doctors. During the malyzed and many recommendations for an ffective program were developed.

Recent Ministry of Health statistics are not considered comprehensive as many cases remain unreported. From 1966-1974 bowever, enough information was obtained to suggest that most cases of paralytic polio hit children between three months and two years of age and that most of the cases have been reported in Riyadh and Qasim. There is no data available as to incidence per 1000 popu-

Most cases of polio in Saudi Arabia appear to occur in children between three months and two years and have been most reported in Riyadh and Oasim.

Dr. Swailern commented on the problem of people not returning for further treatment. 'In 1977 alone, 207 cases were admitted to the Fever Hospital in Riyadh. All but 5% of these cases did not return for follow-up treatment. The rest either did not receive any treatment beyond the initial hospitalization, or were treated at other institutions." Major points of discussion dealing with the prevention of poliomyelitis included the development of facilities for the proper storage and effective distribution of the vaccine from the producer to the consumer which would ensure potency, proper training to see that dosage is administered correctly and, once administered, training to ensure that proper methods of storage are used for the spare vaccine.

عكرًا من الما جملا

Dr. Allistair Dudgeon of London University, stressed the need for organization. "It is one thing to administer the vaccine widely, however the program must be taken step by step. If you are going to spend a lot of money on an immunization program, it is essential to bave constant surveilance to see if the program is working."

Members agreed that the first step is to determine that the vaccine at the end of the "cold chain" is still as potent as when it left the manufacturer and secondly, that the children who have been given the vaccine are responding as they should.

"If facilities are not available locally to monitor these vital issues, specimens before and after vaccination can be collected and transported over-seas to obtain the necessary laboratory, data," Dudgeon said.

Dr. Eberle stressed the social and economic consequences of polio. Of 600 patients seen at King Faisal Specialist Hospital. 279 were either unable to leave home or carried by parents and friends. Of this group, 118 were children unable to attend school.

Eberle said that the cost of rebabilitating these children in many cases is very high and their incapacity is a tremendous loss to the Kingdom. In many cases disability was so evere that total dependency is the rule.

Polio can be prevented. There are two vaccines. The first to be used on a mass scale in Europe and America starting in 1954 was the Salk vaccine given by injection. The second type of vaccine, introduced in 1959, was the Sabin vaccine, taken orally: a few drops on a sugar cube. For Saudi Arabia the Sabin (oral vaccine) has been chosen. This vaccine is given in three doses, the first at approximately 2 months of age, the second six weeks later, and the third six weeks after that. A booster is given at 18 months and again upon entry into school at 5 to 6 years of age, and at 10 to 12 years.

There are no known adverse effects of the oral vaccine. It does not cause polio, but can prevent its development in paralytic form, lis effectiveness is virtually complete if the material is properly shipped and preserved in

Dr. Galel Aashi of Riyadh University, said, "For every paralytic poliomyelitis case there are almost 100 cases or more of non-paralytic polio who are unknown, moving about the

He emphasized that if a child or adult does have polio with residual paralysis, treatment is available in the various institutions to rehabilitate the victims. Sometimes just a pair of crutches or a simple brace is enough to convert a child from total dependency, to one who is able to walk and attend school.

Where there's a will, there's a way...if the will's any good

By Charles Maher

The eccentric multimillionaire died with no will, or with none that could be authenticated. Now, more than 3 years later, his estate still has not been settled.

This could have been avoided, or at least made less likely. Where there's a will, there's Under U.S. law, this does not mean everyone should have a will. Every person of means does not need one. Some lawyers who draft wills have none of their own. But if the people you wish to get your property are not the ones who would get it if the state distributed it for you, then you need

If you wish to leave something to a charity, you need a will.

If you wish a certain person named guardian of your children and a court would not likely choose that person for the job, you need a will.

If you wish a certain person to manage distribution of your estate and that person would not likely be picked by a court, you need a will

Wills also are useful in a less practical, but more creative sense. They have been the instruments of so many parting shots that anthologists bave devoted whole chapters to this form of expression. An apt illustration is the will of John George who died in London in 1791, leaving this message:

"Seeing that I have had the misfortune to be married to the aforesaid Elizabeth, who, ever since our union, has tormented me in every possible way: that...heaven seems to have sent her into the world solely to drive me out of it. that the strength of Samson, the genius of Homer, the prudence of Augusts, the skill of Pyrrhus, the patience of Job, the philosophy of Socrates, the subtlety of Hannibal, the vigilunce of Hermogenes, would not suffice to subdue the perversity of her character...l bequeath, to my said wife. Elizabeth, the sum one shilling. Another Englishman died the same year in ireland's county Tipperary, where he had nherited land on the condition that he live on t. His will provided that 20 Irishmen should re invited to assemble in the gravevard on very anniversary of his death and that each hould be given something to drink, "a stout taken stick and a knife."

Knowing what I know of the Irish characer," he said, "my conviction is, that with these materials given, they will not fail to destroy each other, and when in the course of time the race comes to be exterminated, this neighborhood at least may, perhaps, be colonized by civilised and respectable Englishmen.'

One 19th century author wrote disapprovingly of drawing up wills in anger, particularly on the spur of the moment:

"Somehow, whenever a man of means flies into a passion, it is the most natural thing in the world for him 10 go and make his will. For 40, 50, 60 years he may never have thought of it. When morally he is utterly incapable of performing the task rightly, he rushes to its dis-

When a person feels such an impulse coming on, the writer said, he should proceed in haste to the family lawyer, who "dissuades

"Seeing that I have had the misfortune to be married to the aforesaid Elizabeth, who, ever since our union, has tormented me in every possible from will-making in wrath, as the dentist refuses to extract a tooth in the agony of a raging toothache."

Some who heed this counsel and consult conscientious lawyers, probably will be told to save their money. Their circumstances require no wills.

Take a wealthy widow who wishes to leave everything to her only child, a grown daughter. No will is needed because the daughter will take everything if the mother dies without a will, or, as the lawyers would put it, if she dies intestate. Her property will pass to the daughter under a formula prescribed by the law of intestate succession.

In most states with community-property statutes, a different case arises when a married person with children dies. Each spouse owns half of most property accumulated during the marriage. When one dies, with or without a will, the other ordinarily becomes owner of all the community property. But the deceased spouse may also have had separate property. This includes property owned before marriage or acquired during the marriage by gift or inheritance.

If the couple bad one child, balf the separate property of the deceased spouse would go to the surviving spouse and half to the child. If there were two or more children. one-third would go to the surviving spouse and two-thirds to the children in equal shares.

If a parent does not like this arrangement because, for example, one child is infirm and will need more financial assistance than the others, he should have a will drafted. Otherwise, the rules of intestate succession will come into play, without regard to anyone's needs what to get everything, she should make a will. The law of intestate succession distributes property by measuring degrees of kinship, ln the case of lineal descendants, people who descend in a direct line such as greatgrandmother, grandmother, mother, daughter, the measurement is made by counting generations.

Another problem: suppose a woman's nearest surviving relative is someone she detests. If she does not want the old scoundfel

If the relationship is nonlineal, as in the case of cousins neither of whom are directly descended from the other, a somewhat more complicated measurement is made.

A daughter and mother are in the first degree of kinship, brother and sister in the second, uncle and nephew in the third, first cousins in the fourth. The higher the degree of kinship, the higher the inheritance priority.

By writing a will, a person may override the law of intestate succession, giving all his separate property to third cousin thrice removed. a girlfriend or, if he chooses, to Captain Kan-

And, within limits; he may even leave money for the benefit of nonhumans. One of may examples of this type of gift is found in the will of Jonathan Jackson, a 19th century cat lover from Columbus, Ohio.

Jackson left instructions that a bome to be built for cats. The gift is described in detail in a book on curious wills:

"There were to be dormitories, a refectory, areas for conversation, grounds for exercise, gently sloping roofs for clumbing, rat holes for sport, an auditorium where the cats were to meet every day and listen to an accordian for one hour (that instrument was the nearest approximation he could think of to a cut's voice), and an infirmary. A surgeon and nurses were to be employed to look after the

One woman mentioned in a 1912 collection of wills left a substantial sum for the care of three goldfish, which, upon their deaths, were to have flowers placed on their graves. The same book mentions a gift for the benefit of A man who died in 1828 left gifts for three

"To my monkey, my dear and amusing

Jocko, the sum of 10 pounds sterling per annum, to be employed for his sole and exclusive use and benefit; to my faithful dog Shock, and my well-beloved car Tibb, a pension of 5 pounds sterling.

One book of animal stories tells of a lucky dog, a terrier named Sherry, for wbose benefit 33,000 pounds was left by an Englishwoman in 1969.

Gifts for the benefit of animals often are made through charitable trusts. (A trust is a relationship whereby one person, called the trustor, turns property over to another, the trustee, usually for the benefit of a third person, the beneficiary.)

An attempted charitable trust is not enforceable unless it provides some benefit to the community. A gift in trust "for the care of all stray dogs in Cucamonga" probably would qualify. But a gift in trust "for the care of Sylvester, my pet aardvark," would not qualify in most jurisdictions because caring for Sylvester would serve no appreciable community interest. The trustee could carry out terms of the trust if he wished, but the trust would not be enforceable if he decided not to.

A will not only allows a person to leave directions for the care of higher and lower life forms, but gives him an opportunity to issue all manner of commands, requests and even threats. Many have seized the opportunity. From the will of a London doctor who died in 1827: "Item: I bequeath my heart to Mr. W. Anatomist; my lungs to Mr. R; and my brains to Mr. F. in order that they may preserve them from decomposition; and I decree that if these gentlemen shall fail faithfully to execute these my last wishes in this respect, I will come -ifit should be by any means possible - and torment them until they shall comply." An English farmer who died in 1720 said in his will that be was about to take a "30years' nap" and directed that his coffin be suspended from a beam in a barn. The coffin lid was to be unfastened so he could let himself out when he awoke. After waiting 31 years and finding the farmer still napping, a nephew took him down and buried him. John Reed, a gaslighter at Philadelphia's Walnut Street Theater in the last century, left instructions in his will that he was to be given a minor part in Hamlet, or, more precisely, that part of him was to be given a minor part: "My head to be separated from my body immediately after my death; the latter to be buried (and) the former, duly macerated and prepared, to be brought to the theatre, where I have served all my life, and to be employed to represent the skull of Yorkick." A French countess, Anna Maria Helena de Nouilles, directed in a will probated in 1910 that an orphanage be founded in England and that certain rules be observed: "No competitive examinations, no study before breakfast, no study after 6 p.m. ... No arithmetic, except the multiplication tables for children under 10... No child to be vacci-

A German who died in 1879 left 10,000 marks so that a Bavarian beverage could be served weekly to his old friends at a cafe where he had passed many a pleasant even-

While entertaining wills are in good supply. the typical will offers about as much entertainment as a bill of lading, to which, by the way, it is not altogether dissimilar.

A basic short will form in one drafting manual begins: 'I, WILLIAM BORDEN SMITH, a resident of San Mateo County, California, declare that this is nev Will.

John Reed, a gaslighter at Philadelphia's Walnut Street Theater in the last century, left instructions that he be given a minor part in Hamlet.

FIRST: I revoke all Wills and Codicils that I have previously made.

"SECOND: I am married to Mary L. Smith, and all references in this will to 'my wife' are to her. I have two (2) children now living, whose names and dates of birth are...."

That is about as absorbing as it gets but it is easy to read. Clarity is one of the virtues of the modern will. Lawyers have renounced the old rule commanding them never to say in 10 words what could be less ably expressed in

Observe also that the document is merely called "a wilf" and not a "last will and testament." The reason for the longer term was that "will" once applied only to real estate and "testament" to personal property. After thinking it over for seven or eight centuries, the law decided with characteristic dispatch that it could let one word do the work of four without risking the collapse of the social

Another appealing feature of the modern will is that it does not cost an upper and lower appendage to have one drafted. Lionel S. Sobel, a lawyer in Beverly Hills, California, whose practice includes will drafting, has found that couples often have their wills done at the same time. He said a pair of brief wills running perhaps three or four pages each. should cost no more than $ [50].

But if there are children and the money they may inherit is considerable. Sobel said. "it is fairly common for the parents to set up. trusts in their will for the management of the money." That will cost extra, the amount depending on the complexity of the trusts.

Some people say that lawyers who write wills are "notoriously underpaid." "In no other business or profession," one document on will drafting reads, "is so much done for so little ... A document affecting the lives of scores of people and disposing of thousands or millions of dollars may cost no more than a set of cheap tires. Often it costs considerably less.

If so, a lawyer who stays in the wills business must be crazy. For the moment, though, give him the benefit of the doubt. Suppose instead that the lawyer is sound and that it is the client who is crazy. Should the lawyer refuse to draft a will for a person playing with

Not necessarily. The words "being of sound mind" are commonly associated with wills but the mental capacity required of a person making a will is different from mental capacity required for other purposes. A man may be convinced that he is Frederick the Great and still be able to make a valid will. For a will to be set aside on grounds of insane delusions, it must appear not only that the person making the will had such delusions, but that they had some effect on how he disposed of his property.

LONDON, Jan. 27 (R) — The British Appeal Court ordered that the four-weekold strike in the stete-owned steel industry could not be extended Sunday to the 15,000 workers at privately-owned steel compenies.

Lord Denning, the presiding judge, cited a need to avert a disastrous effect on the nation's economy.

In a controversial judgement, the court elso ordered that steel unions must not prevent foreign steel from coming into the country from Sunday.

Their 90,000 members on strike must also stop "secondary" picketing of plents end depots not directly involved in the dispute. The judgement was attecked as ano-union by left-wing Labor opposition members of Perliament. One, Bob Cryer, said it bed no legal basis and he would challenge it in the "Lord Denning is not there to make politi-cal judgement," Cryer said.

The strike egainst the state-owned loss-making British Steel Corporation (BSC) bas so far bad little effect on industrial output. The judgement overturned that of the high court, which Fridey refused to grent an injunction sought by 16 private steel firms. The compenies ergue that their workers are not in dispute and were instructed to strike although most bed voted not to.

The main union, the Iron and Steel Trades Confederacion (ISTC), seid Seturday it could not call off Sunday's strike until its executive had met, probably on Tuesday.

"But we have no intention of disobeying the lew," said President Leslie Bramley.

Businessmen favor policies in Turkey

ISTANBUL, Jan. 27 (R) - Turkish industrialists welcome the government's new economic package but said that cash aid from the West elso was needed to pull Turkey from its economie quagmire.

At the annual meeting in Istanbul of the Turkish Industrialists and Businessmen's Association (TUSIAD), the private sector's leeding figures said Saturday they expected further measures within the next few days to strengthen the measure announced Friday which includes major openings to foreign capital.

Expressing surprise et the size of the devalued on of the Turkish lira — around 33 per cent against most Western currencies they said that large-scale Westero credits would be essential to the success of the meas-

"The peckage is very logical, very useful for opening up the Turkish economy. The government has started up the motor but the car will take some time to warm up," Feyyaz Berker, outgoing TUSIAD cheirmen, said. Nejet Eczacibesi, chairmen of the gient Eczacibasi holdings, said, "It looks like the whole thing was well thought out. But we must have the necessary foreign exchange to back up the devaluation.

"I em reasonably sure the government has received enough assurances on this from our creditors," Eczacibasi said.

Besides the 33 per cent develuetion of the lira the peckage increased by between 40 end 100 per cent the prices of major stetecontrolled products such as petrol, diesel, cement, coal, paper and iron and steel.

Sales of sugar also were forbidden, indicating that its price would be increased leter. The leader of the Muslim-fundamentalist Netional Salvadon Party, which holds the balance of power in Turkey's netional assembly, described Premier Suleymen Demire's plan as a "calamity that will reduce the nation to poverty. Necmettin Erbaken, bead of the Salvation Party, said the eusterity measures were

'slemmed into the nation on orders from the International Monetary Fund (IMF)." Demirel's minority Conservative government remains in power with the uncertain support of the Salvationists, who oppose Turkey's ties with the West and call for closer relations with the Islamic world, Turkey, reeling under the worst economic crisis in its modern history, hopes to obtain fresh credits from the IMF as well as the West following the stabilization program. The economic package also was sharply criticized by Turkey's second-largest selling newspaper Gunaydin which said the devaluation"was a dangerous operation" that would fuel inflation and called the price increases

"murderous." UAE pipeline construction set Houston Bureau

Construction has begun on a $60 million spao approximetely 136 miles (220 kilometers) across the United Arab Emirates (UAE).

The transmission pipeline will be able to transport 50,000 cubic meters of natural gas liquids per day, and it will be comprised of 16-, 20-, and 24-inch diameter pipeline sections. The project should be completed by the end of 1980.

The pipeline system will transport gas from the Asab, Bub and Bu Hasa fields to Ruwais in western UAE. At Ruwais, the gas will be metered and processed through a fractionation plant, then distributed through supply

The system is owned by Abu Dhabi Gas Industries (GASCO) and is being constructed by the Houston-based firm Crest Engineering, Inc. Crest Initiated work for the project to 1978, and the work has been menaged from the company's London offices.

Naval reserves exempt from control U.S. oil sells at market price

> By Donna V. Adair Houston Burean

In response to recent news reports of U.S.-produced crude oil being sold et euction prices as high as $41,12, the American Petroleum Insotute has noted that since 1976, when Congress exempted the government's share of petroleum produced at naval petroleum reserves from price controls, the oil can be sold at whatever the market will bear.

However, API also pointed out, the oll produced from these same lands that is owned by oll companies exploring for, developing and producing oil from those reserves (received as part of the contractual arrangement with the government) ... is still subject to price control regulations.

From the lime the auction system began in 1976 and until recently. API cites the U.S. Dept. of Energy, prices the government oil has received from the Elk Hills reserve have been equivalent to ot slightly below the prices posted commercially by purchasing companies. In 1979, Elk Hills prices averaged about 10 cents higher per 42-gallon barrel than commercially posted by the commercially posted by the commercial process, ulthough they sometimes brought bids of $1 to $2 above the commercially posted price,

The headline throughout the world were promoted by the most recent Elk Hills sale, in early January, when the high bid for 10,000 barrels of oil a day totaled $41.12, or $11.12 above the latest commercially posted prices. That bid covered January through June 1980 and was for all but 27,465 barrels of the oil daily produced from that reserve. Recent bids on 4,400 barrels per day from offering a bonus of $7.52 per barrel above the commercially posted price. Elk Hills and Teapot Dome are emong

the Teapot Dome reserve included a bigh bid four naval petroleum reserves (NPSs) thet were established under the Land Withdrawal Act of 1912 to ensure that the U.S. Navy would have edequate supplies of petroleum for use as merine fuel. The reserves are Elk Hills, California, established in 1912; Buene Vista, California, also established io 1912; Teapot Dome, Wyoming, established in 1915; and the National Petroleum Reserve-Alaska on the Alaskan North Slope, established io 1923. NPR acreage in the lower 48 states totals

$6,000 acres, while the Alaskan reserve contains more than 23 million acres.

The Neval Petroleum Reserves Production Act of 1976 directs that the U.S. government's sbare of the petroleum produced from the NPRs shall be at public sales to the highest qualified bidder for periods of not more than one year. No single individual or company can obtain control. directly or indirectly, of more than 20 per cent of the estimated annual U.S. shere of petroleum produced et Elk Hills, cites API.

Other restrictions, API noted, that are applicable to the reserves include.

- None of the petroleum sold to small refiners may be resold in kind, that is, it cannot be sold for other crude oil. - Production must be sold at a cost not less than the prevalling local market price of comparable petroleum. - The government may not set aside for sale to small refiners more than 25 percent of the petroleum estimated to be produced annually from all reserves. - Although petroleum produced from the reserves may be exchanged by the purchasers for quantities of other oil, it may not be exported (except to other North American countries, Mexico, and Canada) without a presidential finding that such export will not diminish the total quantity or quality of petroleum avullable in the United States and thal such exports are in the national interest and are in accord with the Export Adminis)ration Act of 1969.

E. Germany gets cheap oil from Soviets

EAST BERLIN, Jan. 27 (R) - Soviet oil deliveries to East Germany last year were priced at up to 40 per cent below the average rate of Western merkets, Communist leader Erich Honeeker said in a speech published

Honecker told a meeting of party secretaries that East Germony had faced a series of price rises for fuel and raw materials from the Soviet Union and other communist partners in recent years and that there were more to

But he said Soviet oil and gas deliveries in 1979 hed cost between 30 end 40 oer cent less than the pertaining Western rate.

Referring to the continued shortage of consumer goods for the population, a constant source of irrigetion and discontent. Honecker seid it was necessary to encourage the development of private trading to help close the gaps in supplies.

Young Kennedy starts oil corp.

BOSTON, Jen. 27 (AP) - Joseph Kennedy III, often e critic of oil company execuoves, said Seturday that he had joined their ranks — starong a company to provide cheep home heering oil for low income families.

"Many people ere carrying a dispropor-tionate share of our country's energy burden," the 28-year-old son of the late U.S. Senetor Robert Kennedy said at a press conference. "For those who have worked hard all their lives end ere now fixed incomes ... it's heet or cat.

"Our program is only the first step to lessen that burden."

The Citizens Energy Corporation is a non-profit corporation that will sell oil to the State of Massachusetts at prices well below current market prices. The fuel would then be distributed to families by the State Fuel Assistence Progrem.

"It's about time we e president in this family." quipped Kennedy, who will draw a salary as corporation president. He said the amount of his salary had not been deter-

His uncle, Senator Edward M. Kennedy, is challenging President Jimmy Carter for the Democratic presidential nomination, Kennedy said the company, established last June, has bought crude oil from Petroven, the Venezuelan National Oil Company, The oil is being refined in Puerto Rico by the Commonwealth Oil Refining Co.

CORCO will handle the refining and transportation of the oil for a refining fee and a portion of the gasoline and residential fuel oll made from the crude.

Planning the play is declarer's most important task, but he does not fully meet this responsibility unless he implements his plans down to the last detail. Take this case where West leads a spade against five diamonds. It seems normal to win the spade with the acc, draw trumps, play a low beart to the king and then linesse the jack of hearts. The finesse ds, but the contract fails when the hearts prove to be divided 4-2. Declarer goes down one, losing two clubs and one heart. The flaw in this method of play is that it does not allow for the chance that West may have been dealt the singleton or doubleton ten of hearts. This is not too remote a *possibility, and it therefore should not be ignored.

Planning to take a heart finesse is surely correct, but when to take it is a matter of equal concern. The proper time to take the finesse is at trick two, that is, immediately after winning the spade lead in dummy with the acc.

Note the effect of a low heart play to the jack at trick two. The jack wins and, after drawing trumps, South plays a low heart to the king, on which West plays the ten. Declarer then leads another heart and finesses the nine after East follows low. The only tricks South loses are two clubs.

It requires a certain amount foresight to recognize the high importance of a low heart play from dummy at trick two. But declarer should realize at the outset that his only real chance for the contract lies in winning four heart tricks, and he should therefore plan his play to give himself the maximum chance to achieve that goal.

major, a lieutenaot aod two noocommissioned officers were executed Saturday night in the oorthwestern city of Tabriz for plotting to separate the province of East Azerbaijan from Iran, court sources said Sunday.

They were among some 20 air force men from the Tahriz hase arrested earlier this month after clashes in the streets of the East Azerbaijan capital betweeo revolutionary guards and militants of the opposition Muslim People's Republican Party (MPRP).

Eleveo people have already beeo executed after being arrested when loyalist guards stormed the MPRP headquarters. The fnur executed Saturday were accused of helping opposition militants and providing them with arms and ammunition. From southern Iran, meanwhile, came a report that two oil pipelines were hlown up Friday. A fire which started on ooe of them was quickly hrought under cootrnl, oil minister Ali Akbar Moinfar said.

Moinfar said the 20 cm pipeline was oot in use when the explosioo occurred, but that a 30 cm pipeline caught fire, the official Pars oews ageocy reported.

Earlier the Kayhan newspaper reported that revolutionary guards found and defused five hombs planted under pipelines on the road from Abadan to Ahwaz.

Fire caused by an explosion on a pipeline near Ahwaz on Jan. 16, which cut crude oil deliveries to the Abadan refinery hy 30,000 barrels a day from the oormal 450,000, was extinguished during the week and repair work started, the Etela 'at newspaper said. In New York, United Nations Secretary-

U.S. committee votes to ask Olympic pullout

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colorado, Jan. 27 (Ageocies) — The U.S. Olympic Committee, acting oo a request by President Jimmy Carter, has asked the International Olympie Committee to shift the I 980 Summer Olymp ics from Moscow, or postpone or cancel the games in protest against Soviet military intervennoo in Afghanistan.

In a unanimous vote Saturday, the USOC executive board adopted a resolution urging the IOC to take such action if Soviet troops were not withdrawn from Afghanistan by Fehruary 20, the deadline set by Carter.

The board's resolution said: "Pursuant to the request of the President of the United States, the U.S. Olympic Committee directs its officers and staff to propose to the International Olympic Committee that the 1980 Summer Olympic games be transferred to another site or multiple sites, or be postponed or cancelled for this year."

USOC President Robert Kane said the resolution would be sent immediately to the Committee for study in advance of an 1OC meeting to be held on Feb. 8 and 9 in Lake Placid, New York, prior to the Winter Olympics.

The White House and the State Department had no immediate comment on the USOC executive board's action.

However, Joseph Onek, Deputy Counsel to Carter uoder Lloyd Cutler, who addressed the executive board Saturday morning, applauded the USOC action as "a very important step."

Onek, speaking to reporters after the vote, added, "This decision is what the President requested."

The five-paragraph resolution also declared that the USOC "shall continue to select and prepare athletes for the U.S. Olympic team whether or not the United States competes in the Summer Games in 1980 in order to recognize the athletes who have been training as olympians."

Kaoe, speaking at a oews conference after the vote, noted that the USOC has not vet eotered team io the 1980 Summer Olympie games, under the IOC charter, he said, the USOC has until May 24 to do so.

The USOC President said that all 68 members of the 78-member Executive Board present at a two-day meeting in Colorado Springs voted for the resolution.

He said the USOC took the action at the request of Carter, not at his order or direc-

Kane said the USOC Executive Board did not discuss what action it would take if the IOC were to reject the resolution because it did not want to prejudge the world body's

The resolution went on to say that "subsequent to action by the International Olympic Committee oo the United States proposal, the U.S. Olympic Committee shall meet to consider appropriate action to be taken by the U.S. Olympic Committee under such circumstances as may exist at that time."

Kane said it was his opinion and preference that the games be postponed, saying this was "a more viable objective than finding an alternative site because no city is prepared to assume the games."

The USOC chief said he thought a boycott of the games hy American athletes would harm the Olympic movement. "It would be a great blow to the Olympic movement to have the United States not participate with the further reactions of the Eastern bloc nations not entering the 1984 games (in Los Angeles)," he said.

Kane added, however, that he could not fault Carter's action in seeking withdrawal of U.S. athletes from the Moscow games because of the current political climate.

Canada has followed the United States in recommending a boycott hy its athletes of the Moscow Olympie games if the Soviet Unioo has not withdrawn its troops from Afghanistan by Feb. 20.

Caretaker Prime Minister Joe Clark asked officials of the Caodian Olympic association to convey the Canadiao stand to the IOC at its meeting in Lake Placid.

Clark said Canada has to stand strongly hehind the United States in opposing what he called the Soviet Union's cootinuing disrespect for human rights.

The Feb. 20 deadline was set last week by Carter in calling for the games to be cancelled, moved or postpooed.

In a 1 1/2-hour meeting at the prime minister's official residence, Clark told three Canadian Olympic officials the cahinet decided Friday to recommend a boycott. Dick Pound, president of the Canadian Olympie Association told reporters after the meeting with Clark that it was too early to say whether the association would recommend a hoycott at the IOC meeting.

The situation in Afghanistan could change before the meeting, he said.

The government cannot force the associatioo to abide hy its wishes, hut Clark said he expected the association would be influenced by the government's position,

Earlier this week, Clark said he opposed a boycott and hoped to have the games moved He said he changed his mind when Carter called for a hoycott if the games are oot moved, postponed or canceled. Carter's statement "requires allies of the United States to be very clear in our position of support," Clark said. The cabinet was also influenced in its decision by "indications coming to us through various diplomtic channels that the Soviet Unioo is capable of being impressed by concerted action by a number of nations where the question of the games is at stake." Clark said, Clark said he regretted the great inconvenience that would be caused to athletes wbo have spent years preparing for the games. However, he said, the Canadian government had to "continue its very strong position against an invasion by the Soviet Unioo of Afghanistan and the continuing disrespect for buman rights that nation bas shown." If Soviet troops remain in Afghanistan, the Canadian government will withdraw financial assistance from any athletes who go to the Moscow games. But Clark said he expected athletes to support his government's position. · He said he would not revoke passports of Daume said the executive presidium would decide at a later date on what recommendation to send to a full assembly of West Germany's Olympic sports federations regarding Olympic participation.

He said the final decision on whether West

Germany competes at Moscow would have to take into account the Bonn government's. Daume met with reporters following a special presidium meeting called to discuss Carter's proposal for a hoycott of the Moscow Daume, an IOC member, said Carter sent a letter to the Bonn government Jan. 19 urging that the West German Olympic Committee support a boycott.

He said the Soviets have since sent telegrams to all national Olympic committees urging them to accept invitations to the Moscow games formally by March 1, two months ahead of the deadline.

In Tokyo, Japan's major political parties were split Sunday over whether the country should go along with a boycott of the Moscow Olympics.

In a nationally televised political debate, officials of the ruling Liberal-Democratic party and the smaller opposition Economie Socialist and Komeito (Clean Government) parties favored the boycott, while the largest opposition party, the Socialists, and the Communist party opposed it.

Yoshio Sakurauchi, secretary-general of the LDP, said his party believes it "improper' to send Japanese teams to the Moscow games,

However, Cabinet Secretary Masayoshi Ito said the government was in no hurry to make a decision on the question. Prime Minister Masayoshi Ohira had earlier said it was up to the Japan Olympic committee, which last Wednesday voted to postpone any decision.

Shinnen Tagaya, secretary-general of the Socialist party, said his party believes politics should be kept out of sports, and Communist party secretary-general Tetsuzo Fuwa said "the honor of hosting the Olympics is given to a city, not a nation?

Mugabe returns a hero

SALISBURY. Jan. 27 (R) - Guerrilla leader Robert Mugabe returned home Sunday from almost five years in exile to a tumultuous and at times violeot hero's welcome. publicly assuring Rhodesia's 230,000 white minority that he meant them no harm.

Striking a moderate note, the avowedly-Marxist Mugabe set out to soften his radical image. At a press conference he came out io favor of continued private eoterprise, provided that workers' conditions improved, and of trade cooperation with racially-segregated South Africa.

Of the white minority, many of whom fear their own image of Mugabe as a heartless revolutionary, the guerrilla leader declared "We do not mean any harm to them (the

A crowd of up to 200,871 turned out in the black township of Highfields for what, for many, was their first glimpse of the 51-yearold nationalist. For ooe moment the rally seemed headed for hloodshed.

The crowd seized an African, accusing him of carrying a gun and of heing ano-Mugabe. He was standing only yards from the guerrilla leader's platform.

Within seconds the man had been dragged off the ground uoder a hail of blows from fists, boots and sticks. The crowd pushed him forward, heating him ioto semiconsciousness as he weot.

Only the intervention of Oliver Tengende, Rhodesia's top black wrestler, saved the man, The huge wrestler shielded him from Mugabe's followers until medical orderlies carried him off on a stretcher.

For Mugabe it was his first appearance in Rhodesia as a major public figure in a Nationalist career spanning two decades. The ligenwed was the higgest to turn-out in Salishury for any of Rhodesia's black politicians campaigning for oext month's pre-Independence elections.

"Pamheri oe Chimurenla," Mugahe shouted to the crowd. The slogan - meaning forward with the revolution is one of the catch-words of ZANU-Pf (Zimbahwe African National Union - Patrione Front.)

The conference's agenda was expanded to include Iran's request for a discussion on foreign pressures on certain Islamic countries, according to conference sources.

They said this would allow the conference to debate the issue of the United States' economie sanctions against Iran in its campaign to gain the release of 49 American bostages beld in Tehran since Nov. 4 last South Yemen, Syria and the Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO) did not attend the conference, but their absence was offset by the presence of Iraq. Algeria and the Libyan Jamahiriyah, They bad all wanted the conference postponed, apparently because of their close ties with Moscow.

The Libyans agreed to come under a compromise formula to postpone the opening day of the conference by one day so it would not coincide with the start of Israeli-Egyptian diplomatic relations.

Egypt's membership of the organization was suspended a year ago because of its peace treaty with Israel.

Conference officials bad hoped the delay would hring Syria, South Yemen and the PLO to the conference, hut only Tripoli decided to come.

Meanwhile, io Kabul, the new regime is stripping Afghanistan of leftist slogans and pictures, apparently as part of its efforts to pacify Muslims who have rebelled against the country's Marxist revolution. Gaudy red signs proclaiming worker solidarity are heing painted over or removed, while portraits of Afghan leaders past and present are disappearing from public display. A decision by the couotry's politburo published Suoday in the official Kabul New Times said signs that have a "leftist character and oot in conformity with the present stage of national and democratic revolution should be President Babrak Karmal has decreed an amnesty for Muslim religious and tribal leaders who fled the country after the April 21. 1978 revolution which installed Marxist rule in traditionally neutral Afghanistan.

In a radio and television address whose English text was made public Sunday, Karmal promised "full freedom and immunity" to returning exiles provided they did not engage in actions against the regime.
